...BORODAJKEVY, age 47, Historian, prior to 1939- Vienna record department, during the war-professor of Modern History at the University of Prague. member of the CV (Catholic Students Organization). Follower of the "Grossdeutsche policy" he joined the National Socialists. Early in his career, he was engaged in intelligence service, probably in the illegal NSDAP intelligence in Austria. His friendship with Dr. ROETTL dates from the time of his study at the university. Dr. BORODAJKEVY's social standing, large circle of acquaintances especially among aristocrats and clergy, make him a valuable figure in the work of intelligence. The first intelligence-political success he attained was the visit of Runciman to Vienna, as a result of which the British Government was won over for the separation of Austria from Germany. At that time, he worked together with ROETTL of the British intelligence; their relation has since broken up. During the war, BORODAJKEVY was sent on important missions to AGRA, Aul and AGMB, where he succeeded in having established his contacts with the Vatican. After the war he spent most of his time in Vienna; he was professor of history at the University of Vienna, formerly professor of Catholic history at the University of Bonn. He is extremely pro-Russian, and was introduced to the Soviet Union by the Russian intelligence in Vienna. He was offered a position at the Moscow Academy of Sciences, but he refused it. He was first at Moscow and then at Leningrad, however not as a member of the Soviet intelligence.
